Inquiry set into hunger

The extent of hunger in Eastern Kentucky and Appalachia will be considered Tuesday at a hearing in Hazard.

The hearing is one of several to be conducted in various regions of the country by a new group, the Citizens Board of Inquiry on Hunger and Malnutrition in the United States. Later investigations will be held among migrant laborers, on Indian reservations and in urban areas.

The new group came into existence after a group of doctors investigating malnutrition in Mississippi discovered that hundreds of people were living in conditions that amounted to starvation. Their reports received national publicity a few weeks ago.

The Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, a Washington, D. C., organization, helped to push for establishment of the Board of Inquiry. The hearing in Hazard will be the first in the series.

The hearing will be held at the Allais Union Hall in Hazard. During the morning members of the panel will hear testimony from welfare recipients. Doctors will testify during the afternoon, and at night there will be an informal meeting of board members, welfare recipients and state and local officials.

Welfare recipients to testify will come from three states—Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia. The counties to be represented are Whitley, Harlan, Letcher, Perry, Leslie, Floyd, Pike, Jackson and Breathitt in Kentucky, Mingo in West Virginia and Wise and Dickenson in Virginia.

THREE ONE-ROOM SCHOOLS CLOSED

Three more one-room schools have been closed by the county school board, bringing the number of one, two and three-room schools still operating in the county to 10.

This compares with more than 50 ten years ago.

Supt. Kendall Boggs said Pine Creek, Blair Branch and Smoot Creek schools have been closed.

Children on Pine Creek will attend Mayking School. Those at Blair Branch will attend the Letcher Consolidated School, and those at Smoot Creek will attend Cow Branch, Colson or Cowan schools, depending on the school bus schedule for their area.

Store changes hands

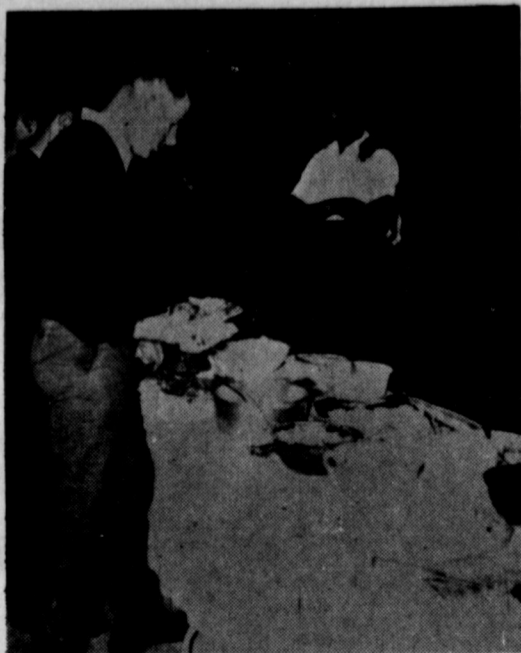

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Amburgey, who have operated a grocery at Pine Mountain Junction for the past 21 years, will leave this week to make their home near a daughter, Mrs. Charles Sigmon, in Middlesboro. Mr. Amburgey has been ill with a heart condition for the past year.

The Amburgeys are natives of Knott County, but Mr. Amburgey has spent most of his life in Letcher County.

The store will be operated by Mr. and Mrs. Ottis Amburgey of Ermine.

Wed 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Arrington of Bottom Fork, Mayking, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary with an open house at their home from 2 to 5 p. m. Sunday, Aug. 27. Friends are invited.

VFW AUXILIARY FEEDS SOLDIERS--These young soldiers from Fort Knox, here for the funeral of Pfc. Jerry Holbrook, were fed lunch by members of the VFW Ladies Auxiliary.

Sedition charges made

A hearing was scheduled today in United States District Court at Lexington on the petition of two Pike County residents for an injunction prohibiting the enforcement of Kentucky's sedition law.

The petition was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Alan McSurely, staff workers for the Southern Conference Education Fund (SCEF), who were arrested Friday night at their home in Pike County and charged with sedition under a state law which prohibits encouraging "the expediency of physical violence to bring about a political revolution."

To train mine workers

A training program for coal mine workers will start soon in Letcher County under joint sponsorship of the coal industry and the Bureau of Vocational Education of the State Department of Education.

The classes will be held in a former maintenance shop of Beth-Elkhorn Corporation at Marshall's Branch. The company is deeding the 12,000-square foot concrete block building to the state for $1.

The coal industry also has agreed to provide an adequate supply of all types of heavy mine equipment which the men would be expected to operate or maintain in work at coal mines.

The industry also will be responsible for recruiting unskilled men to take courses and providing preliminary screening to weed out those unsuited before they are enrolled in the course.

The state will administer the center by an area vocational school, and will furnish instructors in electricity, millwrighting, drafting and layout, transit, hydraulics and acetylene welding and cutting.

Final plans for the training program are expected to be worked out at a meeting this week in Pikeville.

School opens Aug. 28

Letcher County Schools will open officially Monday, August 28.

Prior to the opening, a series of meetings important to school personnel will be held, according to Supt. Kendall Boggs.

On Monday, Aug. 21, all principals, head teachers and teachers of one-room schools will meet to discuss matters concerning the opening of school and to receive supply packages. The meeting will start at 9 a. m.

At 8:30 a. m. Tuesday, Aug. 22, all bus drivers will meet at Cowan Elementary School to receive their buses and instructions. Also on Tuesday, at 10:30 a. m., all cooks will meet in the auditorium at Whitesburg Grade School for orientation and instructions.

On Friday, Aug. 25, at 9 a. m., all certified personnel will meet in the Whitesburg Grade School auditorium for orientation and instruction. The main speaker will be Dr. Thomas P. Collins, director of Title III programs under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. Under this program schools will have a chance to take part in five areas of study or work: child study, language arts, crafts programs, guidance and teacher training.

On Sept. 28 and 29, a two-day in-service meeting for all teachers in the Letcher County school system will be held.

The theme of the conference will be "New Ideas and Techniques in Education."

The program will include lectures and discussions on educational television, teacher retirement, guidance, physical education and other subjects.

Whitesburg freshmen register Wednesday

Freshmen who will attend the Whitesburg High School this year will register at 9:30 a. m. next Wednesday, August 23, at the school.

Principal J. M. Burkich said buses will run that day, about an hour later than the usual schedule.

All other students will report for classes at 8:25 a. m. Monday, Aug. 28.

Bus routes unchanged

All county school bus schedules will be the same as the end of last school year, Supt. Kendall Boggs said this week.

One dead, eight hurt in car-truck collision

A young boy was killed and another critically injured in a head-on collision involving a car and a pick-up truck Tuesday night. Seven other persons also were hospitalized as a result of the accident.

Danny C. Collins, 19, of Isom, died early today as the result of head injuries and other injuries received in the crash. Maurice Caudill of Van, 11, is listed in critical condition with head and other injuries. Also hospitalized were five other members of Maurice Caudill's family:

His mother, Loretta Caudill, 33, for treatment of multiple cuts and a fractured jaw.

His father, Isaac Caudill, 35, for treatment of a fractured ankle and ribs.

Rhonda Caudill, 5, for treatment of minor injuries.

Diana Caudill, 8, for treatment of minor injuries.

Jerri A. Caudill, 3, for minor injuries and observation.

Donald R. Collins, 19, Isom, was admitted with a fractured femur, and L. C. Collins, 18, also of Isom, was admitted with contusions.

Young Collins was the only child of Carl and Bobby Jean Frazier Collins. He was a member of the Whitesburg High football team and played Sunday in the Kiwanis Bowl football game at Williamson, W. Va.

Meeting tonight

An organizational meeting for a Letcher County group to help children afflicted with mental retardation will be held at 7:30 p. m. tonight (Aug. 17) in the basement of the public health building in Whitesburg.

Funeral services for him will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at the First Baptist Church, Whitesburg.

The body was to be taken from Blair Funeral home to the family residence at 5 p. m. today.

Officials at Whitesburg Appalachian Regional Hospital said all those admitted had multiple cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at about 8:15 p. m. at the Hotspot junction near Tillie. Sheriff Maynard Hogg said a new car driven by L. C. Collins and a pickup truck driven by Isaac Caudill collided head-on. The other two Collins boys were passengers in the Collins car. All members of the Caudill family were in the truck, some of them riding in the back.

Hogg said it was impossible to tell who was at fault in the accident. The truck was knocked 69 feet backward, he said. The car was headed toward Whitesburg, and the truck was going in the opposite direction, he said.

Because of the large number of injuries to be treated at one time, the hospital put into effect a modification of its disaster plan in order to provide quick and efficient care.

Many additional personnel were called in to help during the emergency, and all responded by appearing at the hospital within five to 10 minutes after being alerted, according to hospital administrator Robert Minger.

For a period of about two hours after the accident victims first arrived at the hospital, all seven physicians on the hospital's active medical staff were busy examining and treating them.

Minger said the hospital is "grateful for the tremendous response by citizens of the community who visited the hospital after learning of the accident and volunteered to donate blood."

Donald Collins is a son of Hennie Collins, and L. C. Collins is a son of Alonzo Collins.

Deputy Sheriff Charles Hall and State Trooper Roy Hall helped to cover the accident.

AGENT INJURED

A Federal Alcohol Tax Unit agent was injured Wednesday afternoon when he was struck in the head with a hammer as he arrested two men at Shea's Fork in McRoberts.

Joe Hardy, 32, of Pikeville, was treated and released at the Whitesburg Appalachian Hospital. He had received a scalp cut about six inches long.

Sheriff Maynard Hogg said Hardy had been watching a moonshine still in the Shea's Fork area for about two weeks. He saw two men making moonshine at the still Wednesday afternoon and arrested them as they carried the liquor away, Hogg said. As Hardy turned to put down a jug of moonshine he had seized, one of the men struck him with a hammer. Hardy managed to subdue the two men and get to a telephone to call Hogg and his deputies for help. The incident happened about 4 p. m. Wednesday.

The two men arrested at the still were identified by Hogg as Thomas Fleming and Ben Wyatt. They were taken first to the Letcher County jail and then transferred to the Pike County jail, Pikeville.

Hardy also returned to Pikeville.

Cyclist dies

Funeral services were held for Myrl Combs, 18, at his home at Isom Monday. Ministers were Elders Charlie Gibson and I. D. Back. Burial was in the family cemetery on Combs branch at Isom.

The youth was killed August 11 in a traffic accident at Isom. He was riding a motorcycle which collided with a truck.

He was a son of Lawrence and Cordelia Gibson Combs of Isom. He was a graduate of Letcher High School and had completed a year of college at Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, Larry Combs, Isom, and two sisters, Ellen and Lesa Combs, both of Isom.

Moore and Craft Funeral Home handled funeral arrangements.

Beth-Elkhorn's new Pike Mine No. 26, situated in a narrow valley in Pike County, is one of the most modern coal mines in the country.

Surface facilities on the lower level consist of coal storage silos, coal preparation plant, sewage and water treatment plants, and railroad loading yard.

Most modern machines mine coal at Pike 26

A large, ultra-modern coal mine that is expected to have a direct effect upon the economy of Letcher and Pike Counties for the next half-century has been opened in Pike County by Bethlehem Steel Corp.

The mine, called simply Pike Mine No. 26, is the newest mining operation of Beth-Elkhorn Corporation, a Bethlehem Steel subsidiary.

The mine is located about 11 miles northeast of Jenkins, off state route 197, more or less midpoint between Jenkins and Elkhorn City. Its development has involved a multimillion dollar investment on the part of both Bethlehem and the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, which extended its line from near Jenkins to the new mine.

Officials say the new mine is expected to be producing coal for a minimum of 50 years.

Beth-Elkhorn, with headquarters for its Kentucky operations at Jenkins, is by far Letcher County's largest employer and is one of the major firms remaining in the Kentucky mountain coal fields.

Beth-Elkhorn presently employs between 850 and 900 men, with an annual payroll in the neighborhood of $7,000,000.

Expectations generally are that the new mine, still in its early stages of development, will tend to stabilize Beth-Elkhorn's payroll during coming years as some of its older mines mine out of coal and are closed down.

The three entrance portals to the underground mine are located in a narrow valley. Because of the rugged terrain, surface facilities for the mine are located on two levels, which required extensive earth fills to provide about 20 acres of level land at each site.

On the upper yard level, about 180 feet above the lower level, are the mine entrance portals, power supply substation, storage buildings, shop and warehouse building, mine car loading area, and administration building.

The brick-faced, steel-framed administration building houses the offices, miners' locker and wash facilities, assembly room, and lamp room. The structure is insulated with plastic foam and is electrically heated. Interior walls are finished in ceramic tile.

High-capacity continuous mining equipment is used to mine the coal from the seam, which averages 48 inches high. Coal is hauled from the main portal in 35-ton mine cars by an electric locomotive. In the two secondary portals, conveyor belts bring the coal outside where it is automatically loaded into mine cars.

The company said that every effort has been made to provide the safest possible working conditions. For safety and efficiency, inbound haulage is handled on separate tracks from outbound haulage. Electric switches are opened and closed by remote control. Power and communications lines at the plant yard have been placed in separate underground conduits.

Located on the lower level are the coal storage silos, railroad loading tracks, sewage and water treatment facilities, and the coal preparation plant.

The preparation plant has a capacity of 600 tons per hour of raw coal and incorporates several pieces of preparation equipment used for the first time in the United States. The eight-story-high plant is framed with steel and sheathed with tan-colored Bethlehem, porcelain-coated steel siding.

Clean coal is conveyed to a 2,000-ton storage silo. An 1,800 foot-long conveyor belt equipped with a mobile loading station is used to load the coal into the railroad hopper cars. The six tracks can accommodate 240 railroad cars which remain stationary during loading. The loading station moves the length of the tracks and can deliver coal to the cars on any of the three tracks on each side of the conveyor belt.

Three deep wells are used to provide water, which is stored in a 1.4-million-gallon tank on the mountainside, for the preparation plant, surface buildings, and underground fire protection. Water used in the coal cleaning process is reclaimed and recirculated to the preparation plant in a closed-circuit system. Sewage is handled in a 150,000-gallon-per-day treatment plant. Coal refuse is transported by aerial tramway to be used as fill in an adjacent valley.

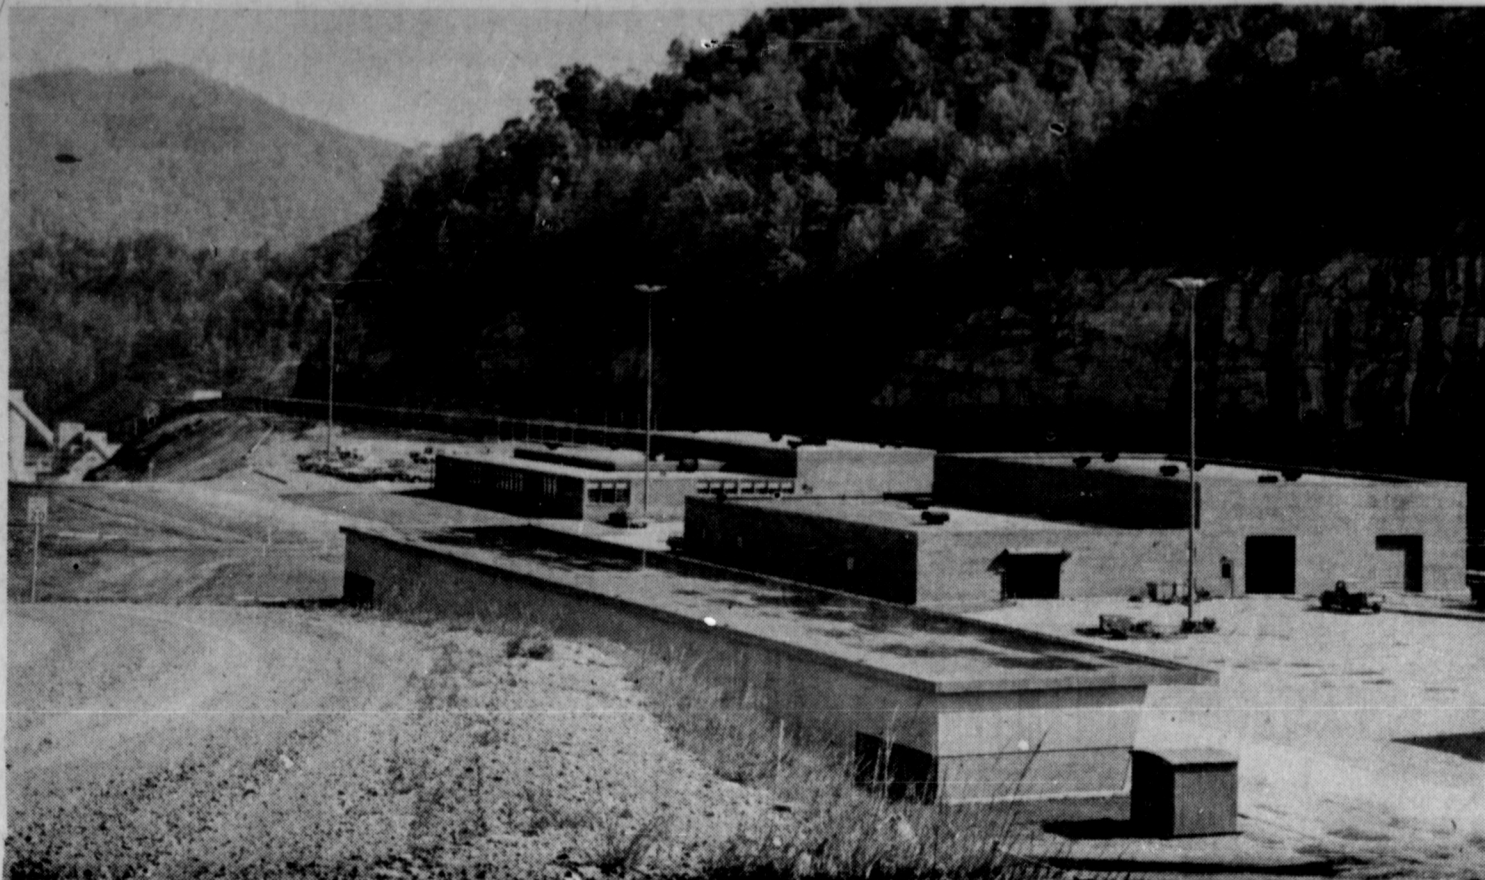

The mine started production on a limited basis one year ago. It accumulated its coal production for several months, pending completion of the coal preparation plant. The preparation plant itself has been in operation since the first of the year, going through a shake-down period of several months to spot any possibly deficiencies in design or equipment.

The still-developing operation at present has 125 employees. Three shifts are worked, two for production and one for maintenance.

W. A. Stapleton, a long-time Jenkins employee, is superintendent of the new mine.

Continuous mining machine both cuts and loads coal from the seam which averages 48 inches high.

On the upper level are the mine portals (off photo to right), administration building, shop and warehouse building, and storage buildings.

Brightly lighted miners' locker and washroom, with tile floors and walls, is located in the administration building.

Miners enter one of the two secondary portals, in which conveyor belts bring the coal outside where it is loaded automatically into mine cars.

Mobile loading station, fed by an 1,800-foot-long belt conveyor, can deliver coal to any one of 240 railroad cars which remain stationary on both sides of the belt.

Atty. Thomas Ratliff, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, took part in the arrest of the McSurelys. He alleged that subversive literature was seized when the McSurelys and Joseph Mulloy, field representative for the Appalachian Volunteers, were arrested.

The McSurelys' suit alleged that Ratliff and Pike County Sheriff Perry Justice had prosecuted the McSurelys "without any basis whatsoever in law or fact" and charged that their property was seized illegally. Ratliff has said that the materials picked up at the homes of the McSurelys and Mulloy included a "Communist library out of this world." He said the material also included a "white paper" by McSurely detailing ways to "take over Pike County from the power structure and put it in the hands of the poor."

SCEF, which employs the McSurelys, is a privately financed organization interested in civil rights and in organizing the poor. Appalachian Volunteers, which employs Mulloy, receives federal funds from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Milton Ogle, director of the AV's, said at Bristol that the organization had found no evidence to substantiate the charges against Mulloy. He criticized what he termed "midnight raid scare tactics" used in the raid against Mulloy and the McSurelys. Ogle said that the AV's do not plan to suspend Mulloy. Two Congressmen, one from Virginia and one from Tennessee, had suggested that Mulloy be suspended pending completion of an investigation into charges against him.

"We've no reason at all to believe that Joe Mulloy is guilty of sedition. The most basic principle of American law is that a man is innocent until proved guilty, and we have seen no evidence of guilt in Joe's case."

Ogle added that he had expected some sort of attempt to get Mulloy out of Pike County as a result of his work against strip-mining in Pike County.

Carl Braden, Louisville, executive director of SCEF, called the state sedition statute under which the three were charged "unconstitutional, invalid and void."

Braden was convicted in 1954 under the same statute in connection with the bombing of a Negro home in a previously all-White neighborhood. His conviction was later set aside by the Kentucky Court of Appeals after the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that states do not have the authority to bring sedition charges.

CULPRITS AT LARGE IN MACHINERY BLAST

State police are still seeking the person or persons who dynamited $300,000 worth of strip-mining equipment at the Tarheel's Coal Co. worksite in Perry County last week.

Harold A. Sigmon, head of the company, charged that Gov. Edward T. Breathitt should share some of the blame for the incident because of his backing of landowners against strip-mine firms.

The company's own truck and explosives were used to destroy seven pieces of machinery.

The marriage of Miss Patricia Webb, daughter of Mrs. Bruce Webb and the late Mr. Webb of Mayking, and Joe Harlan of Atlanta, Ga., was solemnized at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of the bride's mother. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Harlan of Atlanta.

The Rev. William Sparks, uncle of the bride, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The wedding vows were exchanged before a background of green rhododendron and baskets of white gladioli and white mums. Branched candelabra held lighted candles.

Miss Ella Kay Hammock, organist, presented selections of wedding music.

The bride wore a street length dress of white chiffon over satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice trimmed with seed pearls and an A-line skirt bordered with antique lace and embroidered with pearls. Her veil of illusion was held by a lace ringlet trimmed in pearls. Her bridal bouquet was a white orchid with white tulle and blue streamers.

We invite each of you to come by our former store and visit the new managers, Mae and Ottis Amburgey. It is our hope that you will give them the same wonderful support and friendship that has been given us for so long.

Blackey

GROUP NAMES BOARD

By CHARLES ANNE MULLIS

There was a meeting of the Blackey Improvement Committee on Friday, Aug. 11. The following members of the Board of Directors were elected: Joe Begley, Bill Bates, Mrs. Josephine Whitaker, Edgar Dixon, Pearl Dixon, Mrs. Alicene Fields and Miss Brenda Gail Miller. Now that we have all of our officers, let's all get together and work hard to make Blackey a better place to live. The first thing I would like to see is for everyone to cut the weeds and clean up his own property. The garbage truck is running now, so use it.

We also have a rescue squad now. They met Aug. 9 to elect officers. They are Paul McCray, captain; Lee Amburgey, secretary-treasurer, and directors, John Hughes, Estill Caudill, Bob Cecil Williams and Roger Whitaker. Regular meeting time is every Thursday night at 7 o'clock at the center. If you are interested in being a member, please attend a meeting.
